Dear Dr. England:

On such an occasion as this, it is always hard to know just what a person should say.

My thoughts go back to times that were of hard work, pleasant trips, and trying to become more of an adult finding meaning for my life.

In the last "Church Herald" there was a most interesting article on the art of worship. More and more people are starting to want this kind of experience as they go to church and your influence in this area has been great.

You have contributed a tremendous amount to the field of art in many different forms and mediums. I know that just because you are leaving the active role of full time responsibility, it doesn't mean that your interest will fade in these areas.

I wish you a very pleasant retirement and that you will now do the things that you never had the time to do before.

At the beginning of this letter, I spoke of memories. The things that I experienced in the plays, choral reading and other activities under your direction, certainly did help me become more of a person and I will always try and keep them a part of me and my life.

God Bless and Best Wishes,

Marvin L. Boelman
