Dear Dr. England,

As is usually the case, one seldom gives his thanks and credit to those who through their love and life efforts help to shape our lives.

I believe this is very true during our college years when we take our instructors for granted and somehow thanking them at that time just does not seem proper. It is difficult to realize during those brief years just how much influence others will have on our lives.

Those things, times, and places, and persons that stand out in our memories I believe become those things that did help to shape our lives.

The memories of you, Dr. England, your love for your students; your help, guidance, and encouragement; those of Choral Reading, play productions, and speech and drama classes all remain as some of my fondest memories and I am sure they always will.

I am sure my life will always be a little different and for the better for having known you and been under your instruction for those four short years of college.

Thank you for every thing you have done for me.

Sincerely
Allen Namminga
