

Celebration in Orange City
Took part in parade

1936

May 14

THURS.

Thursday. Today is supposed to be a Gala Day for Orange City! I believe it is called a Tulip Festival, when thousands of tulips in Orange City are supposed to be in bloom. Anyway, it is going to be a big celebration, the purpose of which is to raise money for the college. Well, at about one o'clock, the whole student body, including both departments, plus the faculty, was assembled at the west side of the court-house, ready to take a place in the float parade. ~~But~~ We were all dressed in white, the college students with red paper caps, and the academy with blue paper caps. The faculty members wore caps and gowns. We were all ready for a grand stand when - alas! the float representing the college & academy, consisting of the Sioux Center bus decorated with a geometry and calculus problem on each side plus other decorations. The "alas!" is about the fact that the wind had ripped off the paper on the sides and here came the bus with its decorative problems trailing along over the pavement in shreds! So we had to rip this all off and fix up the rest the best we could. There were about 40 floats in all, making the parade more than a mile long. I might add that the college band also had its place in the parade and that we marched to the music. The prizes

126 Celebration in Orange City

Took part in parade

1936

May 14 Thursday. Today is supposed to be a Gala Day for Orange City! I believe it is called a Tulip Festival, when thousands of tulips in Orange City are supposed to be in bloom. Anyway, it is going to be a big celebration, the purpose of which is to raise money for the college. Well, at about one o'clock, the whole study body, including both departments, plus the faculty, was assembled at the west side of the court-house, ready to take a place in the float parade. We were all dressed in white, the college students with red paper caps, and the academy with blue paper caps. The faculty members wore caps and gowns. We were all ready for a grand stand when – Alas! The float representing the college & academy, consisting of the Sioux Center bus decorated with a geometry and calculus problem on each side plus other decorations. The “alas!” is about the fact that the wind had ripped off the paper on the sides and here came the bus with its decorative problems trailing along over the pavement in shreds! So we had to rip this all off and fix up the rest the best we could. There were about 40 floats in all, making the parade more than a mile long. I might add that the college band also had its place in the parade and that we marched to the music. The prize

More about the celebration
Heard a concert given by Sioux City Symphony Orchestra
"Follow the Fleet"

127

1936

for the floats were as follows: First prize - the float of Jacob Vant Hof, Orange City manufacturer of wooden shoes; second prize - the float of Carniers Motor Co. of Orange City; third prize - the float from Le Mars. I don't know exactly what this last one represented. Other entertainments were: the performance of the Le Mars Drum & Bugle Corps, the Le Mars High School Band, several acts of Tom Tom, the strong man, the singing of some Friesian songs, and miscellaneous such as Ferris wheel, merry-go-round, and this little-car outfit <sup>or</sup> whatever you call it. I had the choice of wearing three trousers after the program was over - the white pants I wore for the parade, my Sunday pants, and a new summer pants I bought recently at Rhyser & Burger's for $3.50. In the evening Elsie Kruse, Harriet, Henry, Mike and I went back in the V-8 to attend the concert to be given ~~to~~ in the Orange City Town Hall by the Sioux City Symphony Orchestra under the leadership of Leo Kuccinski and the solo work being done by Jackson Hoppers; an expert violinist of Orange City. Of course, this was quite a wonderful exhibition of talent. Next we went to the show named "Follow the Fleet" featuring Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers, and others. Indeed, this was a gala day for me all right.

Heard a concert given by Soo City Symphony Orchestra

“Follow the Fleet”

1936 for the floats were as follows: First prize – the float of Jacob Vant Hof, Orange City manufacturer of wooden shoes; second prize – the float of Cambiers Motor Co. of Orange City; third prize – the float from Le Mars. I don’t know exactly what this last one represented. Other entertainments were: the performance of the Le Mars Drum & Bugle Corps, the Le Mars High School Band, several acts of Tom Tom, the strong man, the singing of some Friesian songs, and miscellaneous such as ferris wheel, merry-go-round, and this little-car outfit or whatever you call it. I had the choice of wearing three trousers after the program was over – the white pants I wore for the parade, my Sunday pants, and a new summer pants I bought recently at Rhysnburger’s for $3.50. In the evening Elise Kruse, Harriet, Henry, Mike and I went back in the V-8 to attend the concert to be given in the Orange City Town Hall by the Sioux City Symphony Orchestra under the leadership of Leo Kuccinski and the solo work being done by Jackson Hopsers; an expert violinist of Orange City. Of course, this was quite a wonderful exhibition of talent. Next we went to the show named “Follow the Fleet” featuring Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers, and others. Indeed, this was a gala day for me all right.